

Personal Choice Payment Protection

Who will make your loan payments if you're not able to?

If you're taking out a new loan, consider adding Personal Choice Payment Protection. Have you planned for the unexpected? Is your family adequately protected? Can your family cover its debt if an income is lost?

Many people do not have a full picture of what their family's financial situation would be if an income earner were to prematurely pass away, become sick or injured with the inability to work, lose a job involuntarily, go on an extended unpaid family medical leave, or become accidentally dismembered.

Make sure your family doesn't have the financial burden of making loan payments when you can't. Voluntary Payment Protection can help.

If you should die, become accidentally dismembered, or be diagnosed with a terminal illness,

Personal Choice Payment Protection cancels your eligible loan, up to the agreement maximum.

If you become disabled due to an injury or illness,

Personal Choice Payment Protection will cancel your monthly loan payment, up to the agreement maximum.

If you become involuntarily unemployed,

Personal Choice Payment Protection will cancel your monthly loan payment, up to the agreement maximum.

If you should need to take unpaid family medical leave, become hospitalized, or experience the death of a dependent,

Personal Choice Payment Protection will cancel three of your monthly loan payments, up to the agreement maximum.

Other benefits include:

- Automatic eligibility for most borrowers
- Simple enrollment with no medical screening
- Cost is included in your loan payment
- Protects your credit score when you can't pay your bills
- Protects standard of living
- Reduces risk and worry
- Protects retirement savings and assets
- Improves overall financial security

Think you can't afford Payment Protection?

Nearly 48% of bankruptcies are the result of medical problems or death. Payment Protection costs just pennies a day, and it can help your family avoid the risk of delinquency, default, repossession, or credit-rating problems.

Think you're not at risk?

Studies show 44% of working Americans age 25 to 65 will have an illness/injury lasting more than 90 days. Auto accidents are the leading cause of death among those younger than 34.

Think you already have protection?

Employer-provided illness/injury protection typically replaces only 60% to 70% of base pay. On average, life insurance provides three years of replacement income.

Think Worker's Compensation or Social Security will cover you?

Nearly 90% of deaths and 60% of disabling injuries occur off the job. Worker's Compensation won't cover injuries or deaths that don't occur on the job. And, according to the Social Security Administration, more than half of all Social Security Benefit illness/injury claims are denied.

Think because your spouse works, you don't need Payment Protection?

Lifestyles and budgets become dependent on two incomes when there are two people working in a household. Would you be willing or financially able to live without one of the incomes for three or more months? If one income is larger than the other, would the smaller income be enough to meet the basic living expenses of your family?

When you open a consumer or home equity loan, you may choose to add payment protection.
